The larger one is an old stone house that has been thoroughly renovated (63 m² footprint), with completely new floors, windows, partition walls, and a staircase to the upper floor. The smaller house (45 m² footprint) is also an older structure, covered with styrofoam insulation, just requiring a coat of paint. It needs the installation of partition walls, flooring, windows, and a roof. The property has sufficient space for parking for both houses, and there is also the possibility of building a shared pool. This property is ideal as a vacation home or permanent residence, with the second house potentially serving as an investment for tourist rental.
