Description

Description:	ISTRA, HUM - Stone house in a charming location Hum is a small town in the full sense, namely Hum is the smallest town in the world! It is located in central Istria on a hill, above the source of the Mirna River. It is located not far from Buzet and Roč. The towns of Hum and Roč have long been united by common history and culture, and more recently by the famous Glagolitic Alley. There is an interesting legend associated with Hum, which says that it was created completely by accident. The giants who built the surrounding cities in the valley of the river Mirna, decided to build a miniature city with the few remaining stones. Time has not changed much in this medieval town, and the small stone streets still seem to speak the old language of knightly tales. Today, Hum is economically oriented towards tourism and agriculture, which makes it attractive for all lovers of nature and relaxation, but also for those eager to explore. Not far from the smallest town in the world, in the heart of Istria, a stone house is for sale in an excellent microlocation. The ancient stone house has a floor plan area of 22m² and was built on two floors, which gives it approx. 44m² of living space. The yard of the house is 47 m², and a house is drawn on that spot, which opens up the possibility of upgrading the stone house and potentially obtaining a larger area in the amount of approx. 70 m² of floor plan area. Infrastructure (electricity and water) are located
