wineries and the natural landscape itself. The property consists of one main stone house and several smaller houses and outbuildings that were originally built with local stone (grey stone). The total square footage of the building is 327 m², which makes it ideal for accommodation units, a small boutique hotel, bed and breakfast, and thanks to the idyllic location, the biggest potential and investment bonus would definitely be realized by organizing a wedding. The demand for organizing weddings in such locations is extremely high, which means that the market is looking for exactly this type of investment. The decision is up to you, will you accept it? In addition to houses and outbuildings, the property also has an additional 2879 m² of completely construction land, which also offers an even more beautiful panoramic view of the surroundings. The charming combination of history, culture and tradition makes this place special. Momjan is divided into upper and lower Momjan, in the lower one there is a 22-meter high belfry and the church of St. Martin was built in the 15th century. On the western side of the church, on the rock, are the remains of an old castle, to which important events from the past of northern Istria are connected. In addition to Malvasia, the vineyards also produce high-quality Muscat from Momjan, a well-known and appreciated drink even at the courts of Italy and Vienna. An exceptional location and a property with great potential will be recognized by those with a wider imagination and a vision of the final product. Don't miss it!
