Description

Description: A small Istrian town, not far from KRINGE, hides a villa that stretches over 290 square meters. It is a villa that has five bedrooms and three internal and one external bathroom. In addition, it is armed with a heated pool, children's pool, a tavern with a large fireplace next to a spacious summer kitchen and a children's park. The children's room has a glass roof, and in the dining room there is a huge table made of old oak, suitable for large gatherings. The house also has two fireplaces that make the space even warmer and more comfortable. The interesting interior of the villa consists of rattan furniture, sloping ceilings, but also a stone sink and stone supports of a small bar in the kitchen. The villa also has stone floors, a stone sink and washbasins with a copper faucet, and it is these handmade stone details of the villa that make it unique. It is interesting that the kitchen does not have the upper elements, and the lower ones are improvised so that fabrics that act like sliding doors are attached to the wooden supports, just as the houses in the countryside used to have. However, the magnificence of the stone does not cease to stand out only in the kitchen, because in the bedroom, stone pillars on which solid wood was applied were also used as bed supports. THE VILLA IS RENTED VERY WELL AND THE FUTURE OWNER TAKES OVER A WELL-TAKEN BUSINESS !!
